In late June and early July about 50 Soviet technicians arrived in Lanchou (103-41, 36-03) by plane from Sinkiang. They were received by representatives of the Northwest Military Area and of the Sino-Soviet Friendship Association. These technicians include geologists, meteorologists, and mining and smelting experts. They plan individual inspection trips through the Northwest. These techicians also plan to supervise the establishment of a meteorological station at Ch'ilienshan (98-42, 39-10) by the meteorological bureau of the Northwest Military Area.
